FROM: B. FISHER

It was suggested at the Board of Directors meeting at Baldwinsville that the officers of the club try to have an article for the news each month, so here goes.

First of all I want to thank you for the opportunity to serve YOUR club as President. I feel that it is a real honor to given this position.

As you know, if you have taken the time to read the minutes of the Board Meeting. That it was passed by the Board that I try and contact all the people that still have any of the traveling trophies and have them send them to me. (1421 North 11th Street Beatrice, Nebraska 68310 Then the Board will decide on what we will do with these trophies. We can either start awarding them again or contact the donor to see just what he or she wants to do with the one that he dontaed. So please, if you have one or more of these traveling trophies send them to me at the above address as soon as possible.

I would like to invite the Regional Governors to send articles to the News as often as possible. Let us know what is going on in your area. The job of Editor will be much easier if all she has to do is edit the News and not do all the reporting also. Lets work on this and try to have a better informed membership and maybe even a larger membership.

I plan on making some changes in the committees that are now in operation and hope to better the club by doing this. I have noticed that some of the people that were appointed to certain jobs are no longer members of the Vizsla Club of America and these people will have to be replaced. So I am asking you, of the memberhip to step forward and help run YOUR CLUB. If you feel you have the time to give to help improve the Vizsla Breed, please drop me a line and volunteer your services.

One other thing before closing, I know I'll be sorry for saying this, but in the past years while serving as Treasurer I noticed a lot of people had complaints about different things. It seemed to me that very few ever got around to complaining to the right people, the people that could do something about their complaint. I invite you to make suggestions, complain if you will, but do it to the people that can do something about it, not to someone on the street in hopes that he will get it to the person who can possibly correct the mistake or misunderstanding.

Y'ALL COME

Dates have been approved for the Fall National as the 24th & 25th of October at Branched Oak Dog Trial Grounds, Two Miles North and four miles West of Raymond, Nebraska. Pending approval of the Permanent Field Committee the following stakes will be run, Open Derby, Amateur Gun Dog, Open Gun Dog, Open Puppy, Open Limited All Age. The Futurity will be in addition to the above stakes, the Futurity Committee has yet to decide on just when it will be run. Watch the News for their decision.

The semi-annual board meeting will be held at the Colonial Inn Motel located at the intersection of U. S. Highways 6 & 77 in Lincoln, Nebraska. The kick off dinner Friday and banquet Saturday will also be held at the Colonial Inn. This is a real fine motel and not far away is a Holiday Inn Motel so you can make your reservations early. I might add here that the earlier the better on reservations because if October 24th happens to be a football Saturday at the University of Nebraska motel rooms can be hard to find even with as many motels as Lincoln has.

We will try to keep you up to date on how the trial plans are progressing so read your news. As soon as we have judges and marshalls finalized we will let you know who they are. Let us try to make this a trial of All-America, not like it has been in the past, just a few States.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Editor:

A trial prolonged over two days can only benefit one person and that is the professional.

Do you think our club is ready for this? Is the membership one of people who have time for the longer trials or is it one of the average working man who is lucky to have a week-end off?

Other clubs hold trials longer than the week-end and you will find most of the entries are handled by professional people. Are we ready for this?

AKC was once asked to extend an amateur event to three days and I think they answered this well. The amateur should not extend beyond the week-end for this is an amateur event where the handlers are working men are not professionals who get paid for handling dogs.

1970 SPECIALTY & Futurity

Let's not forget to attend our National Specialty and show futurity Sunday, May 31 at the Stone City Kennel Club in New Lennox, Ill. Also plan to attend the show on Saturday May 30 in St. Charles, Ill. Both will be 5 pt. shows.

A membership list has been mailed to Webb Dog Shows and everyone should receive a premium list for these shows.

Trophies have been purchased and all we need now is pay for them. Please send donations to Maxine Paluska, 3205 Pecan St., Rockford, Ill., 61111. If received early we will list names of donors in the show catalog. All names of donors will appear in the News.

We have planned a banquet for Staurday, May 30 at the Holiday Inn, Joliet, Ill. It will be a smorgasborg style dinner with roast beef, chicken, and ham. Cost of the dinner is $4.85 if 40 or more attend and $5.60 if less than 40. Cocktail hour will start at 7:00 with dinner around 8:00.

A block of rooms has been reserved at the same motel for Friday and Saturday. The rooms are together and on the ground floor.

Anyone who plans to attend the banquet and would like a room please contact Mrs. Joe Cuthbertson, 13220 S. 88th Ave., Orland Park, Ill., 60462 by Monday, May 25. The Holiday Inn Joliet is midway between the two shows.

1000 WORDS OR SO..... OBEDIENCE TRAINING

" The Secret in Training"

The more I watch or listen to people train their dogs the more I learn! To watch a dog work perfectly for one member of the family; half-heartedly do it for another; and not at all for still another can appear a puzzling problem to a novice, until he thinks about it just a bit! The principle is the same as with children. You've seen the most well behaved children with their mother or father and then with the other parent, they don't even appear to know what the word "NO" means. Have you ever stopped to think why? Or ever wonder why a dog or child will obey perfectly one time, and the next time the same person and the same words will produce no action what-so-ever? If you think about it of listen to the speaker it's really quite simple. THE TONE OF THE VOICE IS THE SECRET! Nearly everybody has heard the owner of a pet or a parent of a child tell their respective pet or child to go play some place else. After repeating the command two or three times the parent or owner gets mad and amazingly the next time he says it the child or dog minds. Why? Because he, the parent or dog owner, has reached the end of his "rope". If that command isn't obeyed he'll follow it with a spanking. The tone of voice carried this unspoken threat. The tone of voice is the secret to obedient children as well as dogs!

Now, to stick just to the canine factor in this equation, let us remember that a dog is a very smart animal. Smart enough to know when you mean it and when you probably don't. (This usually is when you are too tired, you have company, you are eating dinner or you are too far away.) A dog will take advantage of you at every opportunity if it is to his advantage. The only time a dog will obey you is when it pleases HIM, a reward forthcoming, or when he knows that he has no choice in the matter, for you will enforce your command. Then the dog obeys. So, your tone should convey this conviction EVERY TIME you command anything, or don't waste your efforts and be made to look ridiculous.

Now, I don't advocate commanding in a formal tone every time you speak to your dog a wanted action. That's a little too much for every-day-life. My suggestion is, leave your formal commands for the times then they are NEEDED and then, if necessary, ENFORCE them immediately every time! This way there is never any doubt when he hears the command "Jack COME", he knows that means him and now, and that you'll enforce it every time! Around the yard or in the house call Jack "come here" or "lie down". Speak in a firm voice with conviction. Your dog will soon learn that your formal command means -- DO IT NOW! and your casual command means that it will please you for him to do it, but it is not an "or-else" ultimatum. At times it may become necessary to repeat the casual command a second time, the second time it's repeated put more emphasis on the command word. You'll find the dog gets the picture quickly. If you ever have to give the command a third time it becomes a FORMAL command given with great displeasure. Very seldomly is it ever needed.

Always speak with a quite firm voice. If you yell, the sound is distorted and the conviction is no longer present. Never ASK your dog to do a command -- TELL HIM! To sound like you mean it, you must mean it with every fiber of your body. It sounds a bit dramatic, but it is very important; if the dog has even the remotest idea that you might be bluffing, they will take advantage of you -- or at least test your sincerity. (Haven't you seen a dog or child, upon being given a cammand, pause, as if contemplating -- 'does he really mean it?' or 'is it worth the consequences to decline?') If you've never observed this contemplating, just observe and listen to a parent in a super-market for instance, or take in an obedience match and watch dog owners -- experienced and not -- in the ring. It is amazing; you almost see the wheels turning! On well disciplined children or dogs, you will occasionally see the parent or owner punish the offender in front of company when it becomes necessary. Personally I'm not embarassed by the action, and I have far more respect for them as individuals than those who apologize for bad behavior and keep right on saying "NO, NO, NO!" A few appropriate corrections in front of company would settle that rebellious action once and for all!

It isn't too much to ask a dog to live in relation to your actions. A person is silly to assume that because he is a dog, he can do anything he wants. To assume that an ill-behaved puppy will change as he gets older and "settle down" of his own accord is also obsurd. Even a puppy can learn enough fundamentals so that you can live with him, and as a puppy learns, you begin this tone-of-authority, followed (when necessary) by correction. If learning is started as a puppy, the trials are much easier as the dog grows up. Remember, when you give a formal command, speak it with everything you've got! YOU must takeevery formal command seriously if you expect your dog to.

HOW ABOUT STANDARDS FOR BUYERS OF VIZSLAS?

By D. L. Esmon

In January of 1968 we got our first Vizsla. She was then six months old. All we knew then about the breed was they were bird dogs and my husband, Loren, who never missed a pheasant season had always wanted a hunting dog. We didn't know about the magic spell a Vizsla can weave to gain one's everlasting love. Or about their preferring to be your bedfellow rather than sleep in their own beds. About liking to settle on your lap. Their unbelievable humor and that selfish gleam in their eyes when they're in a teasing mood. Or that soulful 'how can you' look when they know you are leaving them at home. Their sensitiveness to your every mood. And always their expression of proud heritage. But it didn't take long for Ginger to weave her magic or for us to stop wondering how it was possible to love a not-very-big, golden-rust, long-legged Vizsla so much. We just couldn't help it! How could anyone resist one, we asked?

Yet there must always be exceptions. In June of 1969 Ginger was being shown at the Pueblo and Colorado Springs shows and during our two nights' stay and while visiting old friends, they asked us to see a male Vizsla. His owner had been killed in an accident several weeks before. A report of the dog's neglect had been brought to their attention and after investigating, they had contacted the late owner's widow who lived about fifteen miles from where the dog was kept. She had seemed to know nothing about where the dog had been purchased, if there had been registration papers, immunizations or his age. All she wanted was for someone to take the dog so she would not be annoyed with humane society inquiries. She said they called him Skipper.

We'll never forget our first sight of Skipper. He was about fifty feet behind a restaurant, chained to a make-shift dog house and the nearby area was littered with rubbish. An old pan with a handle lay upside down in the dirt near him. We guessed it was used for water at rare times, but tipped over by the lashing of the chain. I think the heartbreak was seeing a sensitive Vizsla, his coat a dried-out yellow, alone and despite his abandonment and the trash strewn area around him, still looking so noble and proud. Then, to see his tail wag hopefully as we approached him.

You guessed it...we brought Skipper home. The next day our veterinarian did a complete physical examination and said that though Skipper was underweight his condition was surprisingly good. (evidence again of the Vizslas' stamina) He estimated his age at a year and a half to two years. Next came a bath and a bed of his own, next to Ginger's. A sound nutritional diet with vitamin supplements followed; but what he craved most was love and attention and this was easy to give. Ginger welcomed a companion and their enthusiastic play was good for both. It was sad at the beginning and periodically since when one of us make a quick move to pet him or put on his collar, he raises a paw as though to fend off a blow. No one can believe now he is the same dog we brought home ten months ago. His coat is no longer dried and yellow. Grooming, diet and love have performed wonders.

About a month after the addition of Skip to our family, I telephoned the widow to ask if she could give us any information about him. If she know from whom her husband had bought him. She said she didn't know, maybe he had even been gotten from an animal shelter. All she knew was her late husband had owned the dog for about a year. After som persuasion, she agreed to ask a friend who might know some information and she would send a note to us the next day. No note.

I telephoned an animal shelter in Denver to ask if they had any record of having had a Vizsla about the extimated time. The wom answering said they had had Vizslas from time to time. Since our breed is still not too widely known I questioned her answer. Yes, she certainly did know Vizslas and the reason so many reached the animal shelter was because they could not be kept in the average fenced yard. They jumped the fence.

Not long ago we took a critical, appraising look at our Skipper. We agreed his head was not to our honest liking; however, the color of his coat, eyes and nails were good. His back was strong and his hind legs well-muscled. An excellent bite, good sturdy chest and we just about needed a magnifying glass to find any white. Except that his ears were 1/4-inch too short of standard, all his measurements were good. He had already proven his intelligence, ease in training, liking to work and of having the loveable Vizsla temperament.

In February 1969 we had bred Ginger to an unproven stud in Denver because appearance and pedigree complimented Ginger's. She didn't whelp. In August we tried again, this time a local unproven stud was used. Still no litter. A consultation of veternarians thought she might have a hormone imbalance and Pyrometra was a threat unless she could be bred and produce puppies. When in February of this year her healthiness denied the Pyrometra worry to our observation, we decided to try to finish her in this season's hows and wait until August to breed. But in a moment of carelessness, Skipper and Ginger changed our plans. On the 8th of April Ginger gave birth to six daughters and two sons!

I wish this story's ending could be 'and they lived happily ever after' because we do have eight beautiful, healthy Vizsla puppies ... BUT none can be registered. All efforts to trace Skipper's parentage have been in vain. Presently, though, Skipper (Tiger.. now) is a very self-important father, he did what the other two registered studs did not .. and on the same prescribed days! Ginger is happy in her role of doting mama. She continues to be on a carefully supervised diet and registerable or not, to combat any tendancy toward hip-dysplasia, our puppies' whelping box has wall-to-wall, indoor-outdoor carpeting and at weaning time will start on the best advised feedings, later there will be adequate exercise. For we do not believe that 'breeding out' ALONE can do the job. And when the time comes to sell the puppies, prospective owners will suspect they are applying for a Government security position. Only those who prove receptive to the Vizslas' magic will become proud owners of Skipper and Ginger's offspring.

OFA Breed Club Representative Meeting
April 3, 1970
by Ken Wierschem

On April 3, my wife and I had the pleasure of filling in for Connie Johnson and representing the Vizsla Club of America at the first meeting of the OFA Breed Club Representative held in Chicago at the Stockyard Inn.

After the banquet, Vern Bower, Chairman of the OFA Breed Club Representative introduced the representatives of the various breed clubs and the OFA Directors present. At this time there are 27 National and State breed clubs with representation in this group. An effort is being made to enlarge this group with special emphasis on obedience clubs. After 2 1/2 years, the aims remain:

1. Education.
2. Coordination of effort,
3. Encouragement for futher scientific study.

Part of this effort will be the establishment of information booths at the larger dog shows.

Two clubs, German Shepherd & Labrador Retrievers, were presented with scrolls for having over 1000 dogs certified normal.

Next on the agenda was a slide presentation regarding hip dysplasia by Dr. E. A. Corley, Vice President of OFA and Chairman of OFA's Veterinary Advisory Council. This, with an extensive question and answer period, accounted for 2 very interesting hours. This is part of those 2 hours:

1. The slide presentation included many radiographs of dogs with normal, near normal, and dysplastic hips. It was shown why a large film care in positioning is necessary. If there is any question as to the diagnosis because of improper positioning or poor film quality, OFA recommends another xray in all fairness to the dog. With faulty positioning a normal dog could appear dysplastic and vice-versa. The film must show the tips of the ilium and include the stifle joint. This larger plate will sometimes allow the radiologist to compensate for monor faulty positioning of the dog if he sees that the fumurs are not quite parallel, the stifles are not quite straight up, or the pelvis is slightly rotated. Three radiologists read each xray.

2. 97% of the dogs diagnosed dysplastic were dysplastic bilaterally--with dysplasia in both hips.

3. Though the minimum age OFA accepts is 12 months, they would prefer that the dog be older when xrayed. The following data was presented:
   at 4 months 5% can be detected
   at 8 months 45% can be detected
   at 12 months 70% can be detected
   at 18 months 85% can be detected
   at 24 months 95% can be detected.
   He said 15% of normal dogs at 1 year will be dysplastic at 30 months. Near normal dogs at 1 year may either be normal or dysplastic at 30 months. This data was based on German Shepherds and Vizslas and collected by the University of Minnesota. The age of appearance in breeds differs. Fat, fast-growing puppies develop it sooner.

4. OFA is also interested in elbow and shoulder dysplasia. In Osteoarthritis desicans (shoulder dysplasia) there is a "family tendency" to this disease and it is felt that it too is a genetic problem, but that has not yet been proven. Dr. Corley doesn't think there is a correlation between elbow or shoulder dysplasia and hip dysplasia.

5. The question was asked regarding the difference between "congenital" and "inherited" traits. He said the major distinction is that a congenital trait is present at birth.

6. The OFA will not give any advice on breeding.

7. There is at least a 5% difference using "normals" as opposed to using "near normals" in a breeding program and this number could be much larger.

8. OFA is working at about a 60% "satisfaction" level. The other 40% being those who are told their dogs are dysplastic, near normal, or should be re-xrayed in 6 months.

9. If you have read Dr. Riser's book, Canine Hip Dysplasia and How to Control It, you are aware of his theory that hip dysplasia could be caused by insufficient pelvic muscle mass. Dr. Corley questions this theory. Is the pelvic muscle mass deficient because of the presence of hip dysplasia or vice versa? (which came first, the chicken or the egg?)

10. There was a lengthy discussion concerning the palpation method of determining hip dysplasia. It seems there is a Dr. Bartons who can determine with great accuracy the presence of hip dysplasia with his fingertips. There are crash training programs in which this method is taught in 3 days. Also, some practitioners of this method claim this method has OFA certification. This is NOT true. Dr. Corley felt that it could be a wonderful tool, but there needs to be much more research done before this method becomes acceptable to OFA.

11. There was another long discussion concerning severing the pectineus muscle (an adductor muscle in the inner thigh that pulls the dog's hip out) in young dogs. This would allow for better contact of the femoral head with the socket so that the cartilage forms better. Dissections have shown that in dysplastic dogs this muscle is short, has scar tissue, is not pliable and doesn't function. Dr. Corley opposed this procedure; and since this alters the dog, the AKC would not allow a dog that had this surgery to compete in any of its events. The operation is dangerous and common sense should keep anyone from having this done. Naturally, this surgery does not solve the problem because the genetic make up of this dog is not changed by this operation. The disease will still be passed on if this dog is bred.

12. Mention was made of the VCOA'a program many times and always with great enthusiasm. Many people asked us questions about our program and seemed interested in starting a similar program within their breed clubs.

These are some of the highlights of the first meeting of the Breed Club Representatives to OFA. The opinions expressed by Dr. Corley, were for the main part, his own. Much research still has to be done in many of these areas, and the OFA needs financial aid. Any donations will be greatly appreciated and will be put to good use. This organization is not limited to only National Clubs. Any state or regional club may also have a representative.

My wife and I appreciate having had the opportunity to be of service to the VCOA.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Dr. John Bussing notified us that his beloved 'Jim', better known as Herzog died in January of cancer of the liver. Herzog was 10 last September. He was the sire of a number of Champions in the Vizsla breed, including Ch. Debreceny Dezso - #1 Vizsla for 1968 in the Phillips System. Many of Herzog's get are here in Southern California and their owners may be interested in knowing that several years ago, Herzog's sire Kurtzschwantz was killed when he saved the life of a little girl in the family. When the child ran into the path of a speeding car, Kurtzschwantz either pulled or shoved her aside and he was hit in mid-air.
