Althouth "retired" at the end of 1976 from active campaigning, "Mike" will continue to be shown at occasional shows. Thanks must go to Ray Brinlee who has handled "Mike" through his career as a special with the utmost of professionalism and special thanks to Roy and Barbara Stephenson for selling me this truly magic dog.

We have recently acquired "Mike's" full, younger brother Ch. Totton's Zeus and will be showing him in 1978.

EDITOR'S NOTES

Congratulations to our new officers and directors. (Listed on the inside front cover.) Hopefully, we will have an active year, accomplishing gains in many areas. We all need to express our opinions in areas of concern. Our officers and directors must know our feelings if they are to act effectively on our behalf. Some areas of concern to you may be the quality of judging, the need for a hotline for lost and found Vizslas, methods to involve people in the decision making of V.C.O.A. committees, or whatever is on your mind. Whatever your concern is, the board needs to know.

The October AKC Gazette has a large section of Field and Retrieving Trials. It should be of special interest to Vizsla owners. One article will be by Bob Costa, whose Vizsla appeared in the coming attractions section of the September Gazette.

Believe it or not, Christmas is just around the corner. You may wish to give a Decade of Vizslas to a Vizsla enthusiast. This 1960-1970 issue will never be reprinted and contains the picture history of our breed. For those of you who have not seen this book, I would advise you to get one while they last. If you wish to put a Christmas message in the "News," now is the time to get it in.

Unless your dues are paid, this is the last issue of the "News" you will get. Our Treasurer has a new address. Check the inside front cover for her address if you are sending your dues at this time.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT HIP DYSPLASIA

John E. Crage, V.M.D.

My previous articles on the subject of hip dysplasia have been largely negative. I have been trying to break what I consider is a strangle-hold that the OFA has on the dog fancy. I am frequently asked by breeders and dog owners what I think they should do about hip dyspasia if I disagree so strongly with the approach that OFA, and a large segment of the veterinary profession, has recommended.

Although I obviously do not have all the answers, I do have specific recommendations based on the available information about this condition. Since so many people, even those who feel that the approach of OFA is not the answer, are concerned and confused about this problem, I present my views for what they might be worth. I will try to review the known facts about this condition, expound a theory that fits all the known facts, and make recommendations based on that theory. Of course this theory, as should be the case with all theories, is subject to "change without notice" if facts are discovered that are not consistent with it.

FACTS

Lust and his associates at Cornell have proven conslusively that subluxation does not necessarily induce dysplasia. This throws the current theory (that dysplasia results from subluxation) right out the window. Cardinet, Wallace, et al., working at Kansas State University, showed that the pectineus muscle became shortened and inelastic in cases of hip dysplasia. Various workers have demonstrated that changes occur in the hip with imbalance of hormones, vitamin C, enzymes and possibly diet. Cardinet has been unable to demonstrate that sectioning the pectineus muscle on one side made a significant difference in the development of dysplasia. Clinical experience has demonstrated that sectioning the pertineus muscle relieves the symptoms of hip dysplasia in most cases. As incredible as it seems, this is about the sum total of the "hard" facts that have been published about hip dysplasia.

Reams and reams of articles have been published on the subject dealing with statistical analyses which seem to me to be either not significant or not sufficiently controlled to justify the conclusions that are sometimes drawn. Various theories such as "overnutrition" (whatever that means), muscle mass, etc., are proffered periodically. While these factors may play a role in the development of HD, clinical evidence does not support them as primary causes.

THEORY

In spite of the failure of Cardinet to prove that the shortened pectineus muscle produced dysplasia, the fact that it does become shortened and inelastic and the fact that sectioning it relieves the symptoms of hip dysplasia are our most promising approaches. Let us assume that this is not a simple condition. There does not seem to be any relationship, for instance, between the shortened pectineus muscle and the changes in the hip brought about by imbalance of hormones, vitamin C, and enzymes. If these changes can be brought about experimentally then we must assume that they can occur naturally. Let us Label these changes "metabolic" changes, including anything that changes the development of the hip joint, besided the pressure from the shortened pectineus muscle.

If we assume this, then a theory presents itself based on four varables. The pectineus muscle shortens at a variable age and to a variable degree. If this happens at an age when the bones are malleable, the effects are different than if it happens when the bones become set. If "metabolic" changes also exist, then the effect of the shortened pectineus muscle will be different than if they do not. If the shortening is limited, then the hips might be able to accomodate the shortening and remain perfectly functional although they might show radiographic changes. We must also add the fact that some dogs have subluxed hips. Even though it has been proven that subluxation, by itself, does not necessarily induce dysplasia, we must accept the fact that a dog with tight hips will respond differently than a dog with subluxed hips. This then becomes the fourth variable. The pectineus muscle shortens to (1) a variable degree, and (2) at a variable age, and (3) with or without various metabolic changes, and (4) with or without subluxation. By using these variables, we can not only explain all the variety of cases that we see clinically, we can also give a theoretical explanation of the failure of Cardinet to prove that sectioning the pectineus muscle prevented dysplasia. I haven't seen his radiographs but he might have been excountering metabolic changes as well as changes from pressure from the shortened pectineus.

RECOMMENDATIONS

For the breeder who wants to know what he should do about hip dysplasia, I can only refer him to Dr. Olssen's article in the Gazette of last August. He recommends that the status of the hips should be only one factor in determining whether a dog should be bred. While I vehemently disagree with the approache of OFA, I do feel that there are probable some genetic factors that we should not entirely desregard. Breeding shock should have their hips radiographed as part of their evaluation for type, soundness and other faults. An animal should not be used who has other faults simply because his hips happen to radiograph "normal", nor should a dog with something to offer the breed be discarded because his hips do not radiohraph "normal". Hopefully research will come up with more definitive knowledge about this condition so that we can made a more specific recommendation.

My advice to the owner of a pet dog of a breed subject to dysplasia is somewhat more specific. The key to the problem appears to be the shortened pectineus muscle. The owner should learn where this muscle is and how to determine that it is becoming shortened. Every puppy souuld be trained to lie on his back with his legs spread as far as they will go. If the pectineus is normal, the legs should go all the way to the floor and no tight muscle should be felt when the dog is relaxed. A dog being examined by a veterinarian might not be as relaxed as he would be at home. This could give a false reading to the veterinarian. When the pectineus muscle becomes shortened it can be seen as a round ridge running along the middle of the thigh. In mild cases the legs can still be spread without too much discomfort but as the muscle shortens, it becomes more difficult and more painful to spread the legs. In cases where the muscle has completely changed to fibrous tissue it is sometimes impossible to spread the hind ligs at all. In addition to this shortening, there are functional changes related to restriction of movement and pain on the hips. This can take the form of slowness in rising, "bunny-hopping" instead of free movement, standing "cow-hocked", lameness in one leg or the other, and even temperment changes. There is apparently considerable pain when the process is developing.

Hip radiographs are useless in diagnosing or predicting this condition and should not be recommended with out symptoms. The observant owner who brings his animal to the veterinarin at the first sign of this shortening will usually find that the hips x-ray normal. The changes that occur in the hips seem to result from the shortened muscle rather than occurring in the initial stages of the condition.

Fortunately, this condition can be immediately, and usually permanently, relieved by sectioning this muscle, and relatively simple and safe procedure. But this raises some questions and is a judgement that must be made between the owner and the veterinarian. Many cases, where the joint, and shortening is limited and the bones malleable, make a complete adjustment by remodeling the hip joint, and remain functionally normal all their lives. Furthermore, it poses an interesting ethical question. Is this an altering operation in the sense of trying to hide a genetic fault or is it a medical procedure like tonsillectomy? Should a dog who has had this operation be shown or used for breeding? The definitive answer to this question will have to wait until we know more about the causes of the shortening. If it is caused by a virus or metabolic condition then it might be argued that it is not a disqualifying operation.

It has been suggested that a veterinarian should not perform this operation without also sterilizing the dog at the same time. I an personally convinced that genetics plays little or no role in this disorder, therefore I would be reluctant to enforce such a condition upon my clients. I think a great many veterinarians would feel similarly.

I think it is incredible that study of the changes in the pectineus muscle seems to have been suspended simply because the significance of the shortening has not been discovered. Anyone concerned with this disorder should insist that study of this muscle receive the highest priority. I feel that the answers to hip dysplasia will fall into place once we learn what makes this muscle shorten.

From ESAA Newsletter

Dear V.C.O.A. People,

I am writing to plead that this year and the future years we do not disgrace ourselves as we did last year. To the casual observer, the 1976 National was a resounding success. To one motel owner and several concerned club members, it was a public relations desaster.

What I am talking about is the nauseating mess some of us left in the motel — encluding stool wadded up in towels and vomit on the floors. Is it too much to ask that everyone clean up after both himself and his dogs? Perhaps the club should fork over plastic bags and a pooper-scoop. Maybe we should send a clean up crew around each morning. Or how about an inspector empowered to charge up to $25.00 in fines to sloppy exhibitors (plus damages) to be split with the long suffering motel owners?

A couple more messes like 1976, and we won't be welcome anywhere at any price; not to mention our reputation.

When inquiring with motels in our area (we'd like to host the National some year) I was met with the request for references from motels we'd used previously. What Could I say? I sure as H—— couldn't use last year as a reference!

Yours in love for Vizslas,
Elzabith S. Walton

HAWKEYE VIZSLA CLUB FIELD TRIAL

The Hawkeye Vizsla Club held its Spring Trial April 23 – 24, 1977 at the Red Rock Dog trial area, Prairie City, Iowa. Seventy dogs were entered at our trial, 38 Vizslas and 32 GSP's. The weather was beautiful and a spirit of congeniality prevailed amoung those present. Since the Hawkeye Club is rather small, we appreciated the help and support of the members of the Eastern Iowa and Nebraska Vizsla Clubs and our short-hair friends from Iowa and Nebraska. Several new Vizsla owners were present, perhaps as a result of an article in the Des Moines paper that stated the date and location of our trial. They seemed enthusiastic about trialing and we hope they will become future members of our Club.

The high light of Saturdays events was the sumptious banquet served the judges and their wives on the trial grounds at noon Saturday. In appriciation for the effort expended in judging our trial, the Field Trial Committee decided to really "put on the dog". The banquet table was set under a blue and yellow conopy with fine china and linen, flowers and candles. The repast consisting of salad, relishes, baked beans, fried chicken, rolls, potato salad and carrot cake was prepared by Mary and Bill Hoscheid. After sampling the fare it was easy to see how Mary had earned over 27 blue ribbons at Iowa State Fairs. The sommelier for the occasion was none other than our own Paul R. Holzworth. M.D., who poured a vintage mellow burgandy wine imported from Ohio expecially for the event. Our judges and their wives were duly appreciative of the meal, as were the field trialers who decended on the banquet table as soon as the judges resumed their duties.

FUN MATCH & FUN TRIAL
DAVIS FARM THREE BRIDGES, NJ

June 25, 1977

The out look in the weather department was grim, thunder storms were predicted for the day, but actually what looked unpleasant turned out to be great. The overcast sky and cool breeze were welcome for running dogs.

The fun trial was judged by friends and club members. There were quite a few people participating that were new to the breed and field trials and dog shows. They seemed to enjoy the activities and possibly went away with a few pointers on training for the field and the show ring.

Mr. Robert McKowan, our show judge, was very patient with us and our dogs. He showed people how to stand their dogs and helped with other problems one can encounter in the ring. He commented on how nice the dogs were in general.

John and Barbara O'Brien were on hand to tattoo dogs for us. It was very nice of them to donate their time and we thank them very much.

Nancy and John Watkins invited all over to their home for a buffet dinner. A nice conclusion for a terrific fun day. And last but not least, a big thank you to Joyce and Denes Burjan for letting us use their grounds and to Linda Promaulayko for putting the whole event together.

VCOI FUN TRIAL

The VCOI Fun Trial held at Busch's Farm (?) was a hugh success. For the first time the field trial dogs were separated from the non-field trial dogs for the stakes that were run. In addition to the four events for big boys and girls, a junior handler stake was offered for the smaller boys and girls.

The judges for the young dog stakes praised all of the performances very highly. They commented that it was difficult to properly weigh the performances according to the dogs ages since the young dog stakes included dogs from 5 months to two years old.

In conclusion, everyone had a good time. Many, many new faces were there and we sincerely hope we will see them often in the future. We ran 47 Dogs that day, and that's a lot. Without the help and cooperation of too many to name, it would have been impossible. We are always concerned at the end of a big day like that, that some new person may have been ignored or slighted in some way. Please, if this was your first club event try to understand that in addition to running the event, we also compete and get as excited about it as you do.

These fun trials are in introduction to the wonderful sport of field trialing.

A PARABLE FROM THE VIZSLA BIBLE

In the beginning there was the light of sure success and the newcomers saw it with grand visions of Best In Show the first time out for was not this their first Vizsla the finest one ever to walk on earth?

Then from a great power in the East there was sent those who would judge and alas, surely they the judges must have been evil and corrupt for the light was dimed and others were chosen to stand in the glow of it.

Great sorrow and darkness decended unto them for they believed the falsehood that all dog shows were fixed and the great judges chose only handlers and friends; yea they were bitter for now the glow of the light could not be seen at all.

As children they wandered in the wilderness of the dog game, for they were full of misunderstanding; weep not, for behold, from out of the shadows quietly appeared one by one those disciples of the dog world — the dedicated breeder's who would give wise council to those who would ask and would listen.

And it came to pass as the years rolled by that the darkness lifted and the children became as grown; they wandered no more, for they had sought and obtained wisdom from those of old and they themselves became deciples to the newborn of the dog world.

Now their eyes see clearly and straight ahead no longer sending dark glances toward the power in the East and the judges sent thereout, for now they have learned and they take up thier leashes and follow the path with sure steps and they journey for a great reason.

Yea, verily it is true that wide is the path and short the distance to things not worth having and most assuredly the path to Best In Show is very narrow and very long . . . but observe ye them now, for they hold the light and they travel in the glow of it, for the light IS THE JOURNEY, not the end thereof . . .
